

The Sawdust Question.

The Truckee Republican says: The Assembly Committee on Fish and Game was granted leave of absence from Saturday until Tuesday, in order that they might visit Truckee and inspect the subject of the deposit of sawdust in the Truckee river. The honorable gentlemen may be expected to arrive here tomorrow morning, and our leading citizens should be on hand to receive them and make their stay here pleasant. We were not aware that the sawdust question was before the Legislature this year, except that the Nevada Legislature had presented a memorial requesting some legislation on the subject. It is probably for the purpose of ascertaining if such legislation is needed that brings the Committee here. We shall see that they are properly enlightened.

Latest: A dispatch received this afternoon states that the Senate and Assembly Committees on Fish and Game will be here tomorrow, and will meet a Committee from the Nevada Legislature. Together they will consider the sawdust question. Senator Yell, the author of the sawdust bill two years ago, will be with the party.

The Hold-Overs.

ED. APPEAL—Your article on the hold-over Assemblymen meets the views of every intelligent man in the city. In my opinion we ought also to have hold-over Congressmen. Two years' experience only enables the Congressman to learn the ropes and he ought to have at least a four years term of office.

COMMON SENSE.

—A very curious statesman is Lord Randolph Churchill. He gives as a reason for his resignation from the English Cabinet that the Government's naval and military estimates exceeded £30,000,000. An American statesman that resigned because of large appropriations would not only be considered ignorant of the rudiments of statesmanship, but absolutely crazy.

None of our Solons would think of such a thing.

The Idaho Statesman says:

A petition is being circulated for signatures, praying that in the event of attaching the "Pan-handle" to Washington, our Legislature memorialize Congress to extend the boundaries of Nevada so as to include the remainder of Idaho Territory—in short, to wipe 'er out. The petition already has the sanction of numerous heavy taxpayers.

On motion, A. B. 72, House of Refuge bill, was referred to special committee to be appointed by the chair.

House adjourned.

The Storm.

As the APPEAL goes to press the snow is about two feet deep, and still falling. The road is blocked in all directions, and there is 17 feet of snow reported at the Summit. Friend says that the moisture fallen to date is still behind that of last year by 3 1/2 inches. Beyond this, the APPEAL readers know as much of the storm as anybody.

SMOOTH WORK.

How the Ladies Captured a Prime in the Senate.

The job of copying the journals is always considered a fat thing in both the House and Senate by old experienced birds like George I. Lammon and Charley Laughton. No one on the outside is even supposed to be able to take this job in.

One morning, however, early in the session a resolution was offered giving this work to Mrs. Pixley and Miss Clinton, two lady Clerks in the Senate. It passed with nineteen solid votes and as it was offered Lammon and Laughton looked like men who had just been woken up from a sound sleep to be confronted by some strange and unusual spectacle. Meanwhile, the two lady Clerks were writing away apparently unconscious of anything at all going on, and their faces were as blank and innocent as that of a little child hunting for four leaf clovers in a meadow. One of the Senators, however, told the APPEAL reporter that he saw one of the ladies, he is not positive which, slide her small foot slyly under the desk and press it upon the foot of her companion but her version is scooted by the other Senators. Such a thing did not seem plausible. They had picked up $300 as easily as turning one's hand over taken the trick, too, right under the nose of two of the smoothest men in the Capitol building.

Recently the APPEAL reporter interviewed the ladies on the subject.

"I see you ladies captured the copying of the journal."

"Oh, did we, indeed; we are glad to hear that," said Mrs. Pixley gleefully. "I was told it had passed but paid so little attention at the time that I was not certain."

"I hadn't heard much about it," said Miss Clinton with a sort of over-the-far-blue-hills-Mari look. "Do they pay extra for the work?" asked Mrs. Pixley with a perfectly composed face.

"Some three hundred dollars, I believe," answered the reporter.

"Oh, how nice; we didn't suppose there were any extra emoluments. You know we are comparative strangers to the ways of legislation and this is our first term."

"Who lobbied it through?"

"I beg pardon, Sir; did you say lobbied? These professional terms are all strange to us. Some one just made the motion and it went through. We didn't say a word to anybody, did we, Miss Clinton?"

"Oh, no indeed; not a word. We could never ask for such a thing as that, could we, Mrs. Pixley?"

"Couldn't lobby if you tried."

"Oh, no. We leave that for the men to do."

"Yes, I understand."

"I'm glad you do; it's about time."

"What did Mr. Lammon say when the resolution passed?"

"He was speechless for several minutes and they had to take him out into the ante room and pour water on his head before he was able to catch his breath. If I had had a camphor bottle I would have sent it out."

"And Laughton?"

"He settled a few inches lower in his chair and gave a low, musical whistle, then after the adjournment he came up and shook hands remarking that we were as smooth as velvet. Say, do tell us what he meant by that? What had we been doing? If we have been doing anything unconstitutional we want to know it."

The reporter left rather than to discuss the constitutional question.

Death of John McGuirk.

For some time past, John McGuirk, the plumber, has been suffering from stomach troubles. Yesterday he was about as usual, and seemed perfectly well, but about 4 in the afternoon he was taken very sick, and died inside half an hour. McGuirk was a hard working mechanic, who for years past has made a brave fight in Carson for a livelihood for himself and family, and his death will be much regretted.

—If a well be poisoned, we be to those who drink thereat. It is worse to poison the fountain of life for one's self, and for posterity. Often by carelessness, or misfortune, or inheritance, this has been done. Ayer's Sarsaparilla frees the blood, the vital stream, and restores appetite, strength, and health.

SEASONABLE QUOTATIONS.

A Few Observations from the Bard of Avon.

The following quotations are culled from Macbeth, Richard III, Timon of Athens, etc., etc:

The Chaplains—"Great God of Heaven, say amen to all."

The Mugwumps—"A scum of Bretagnes, whom the over-cloyed country vomits forth."

Wallace, Cleve and Stoddard—"Let us council for tomorrow's business."

Sergeant-at-Arms—"Throng to the bar."

The orator—"For self same wind, that I could speak withal."

The railroaders—"Traffic's thy God."

The jobbers—"A knot, you are of damned bloodsuckers."

Briggs—"My voice is still for war."

The political office seekers (before election).—"I'll cheer them up with justice of our cause; with promises of high pay and great rewards."

The O. S. after election.—"I'm busy now."

C. C. P.—"A young man broke with the storms of State." (Slightly altered.)

The insurance companies.—"Policy sets above conscience."

The political kickers.—"A fearful scouring doth choke the air with dust."

Tom Wren.—"Thrice the brindle cat has mewed."

The Meteorological Director.—"Give me a calendar. Who saw the sun today?"

The lobby.—"Gold were as good as twenty orators."

Mohan.—"I thank God for my humility."

ALL SORTS.

—Sleighs, $5 an hour.

—Wizard Oil at Geo. Thaxter's.

—No stocks yesterday—wires down.

—During the storm the quality of beef at Dies' market remains unchanged.

—Pay ore is being hoisted from the Savage for the first time in twelve years.

—Reno lit its streets with the electric light on Saturday night. Tally one for Reno.

—The Reno people are still talking of a Prison removal, but the majority of the Senators oppose it.

—Considerable fun is being made of Drury's wild rice bill, but there seems to be no solid reason why it should not pass.

—There was no quorum in the Senate yesterday owing to the fact that the quorum was snowed up in Reno and elsewhere.

—A four-in-hand and sleigh belonging to Raycraft, ran away last evening. When last seen they were going up King street.

—Just as you go into the front gate of the Capitol you will notice a big placard sticking above the snow, which reads: "Keep Off the Grass."

—Frank McCullough took charge of the State Prison yesterday with Pat Corbett as Deputy and McInnis of Reno Captain of the Guard. The APPEAL wishes success to the new administration.

—It is said that Senator Ingalls twisted the tail of the British Lion clear off, and took it home with him. The Senator has no right to the tail under the laws of Nations, and should send the trophy to Windsor Castle at once.

—No other medicine is so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for colds, coughs, and all derangements of the respiratory organs tending toward consumption. In ordinary cases it is a certain cure, and it affords sure relief for the asthmatic and consumptive, even in advanced stages of disease.

Relieved.

The Deputy Surveyor General, M. D. Noteware, who under the law was Secretary of the Board of Regents of the University, has turned over to the new Board, consisting of Governor, Secretary of State and Supt. of Public Instruction, all books, documents, coin, etc., in his charge, and is thus relieved of his duty as Secretary. The new Board will name its own Clerk, in accordance with the new law.

Episcopal Social.

On Thursday evening next, Feb. 17th the Episcopal ladies will hold another of their popular socials at Armory Hall. Dancing and refreshments. Admission 50 cents.
